Alia Jennings
Hillsboro Firefighter/EMT
FSA Student

Alia began her fire career as a volunteer with Hillsboro (Oregon) Fire. After three years, she was hired as a career firefighter. At the same time she began studies in the Portland Community College Fire Protection Technology Program, and has since completed an AAS degree. She also holds the EMT-Intermediate certification. She is continuing her education through the FSA program at Eastern Oregon University.

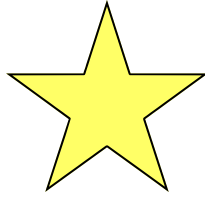

Alia appreciates the challenging and valuable education available through the FSA Program stating: "It takes a lot of work to keep up on the fast progression of knowledge, techniques and leadership in the fire service these days."

She mentions that she enjoyed the FSA hybrid Legal Aspects class and gained valuable knowledge through the course which is useful in her job.

Married to a firefighter from Boston, she is the mother to two stepdaughters. She loves the outdoors, listing fly fishing and mountaineering among her favorite activities.

Alia also participates in a non-profit organization, which her husband directs, called International Fire Service Assistance Organization (IFSAO). IFSAO provides fire service training and equipment, as well as humanitarian aid to impoverished countries. The organization is always seeking partnerships and volunteerism among the fire service community.
